Operation All-American Lightning

Air Force
airpower highlighted in joint exercise
over Iraq

By Maj. Dave Honchul
U.S. Central Command Air
Forces-Forward Public Affairs

Dyess Air Force Base members played a key role in putting airpower on display as a part of a show-of-force demonstration at a western Iraqi airfield during a joint capabilities exercise Feb. 24.

Operation All-American Lightning, a joint Army-Air Force operation, was designed to demonstrate joint U.S. capabilities for rapid deployment and employment of forces anywhere in the world to support the global war on terrorism, according to officials from the 82nd Airborne Division.

The operation involved division troops conducting airdrop training from C-130s as well as conducting mock airpower attacks by an A-10s and F-16s.

A C-130 crew from Dyess was one of five that participated in the two fly-bys of the airfield, dropping a total of 240 Army troops.

“(It was a) total Air Force team effort” in accomplishing the mission,

Staff Sgt. Suzanne Jenkins

Paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division load onto a C-130 aircraft at Balad Air Base, Iraq. The C-130s performed a massive airdrop as part of Operation All-American Lightning. The operation was a joint U.S. Air Force and Army show of force capabilities exercise.

said Lt. Col. Gregory Otey, 745th Expeditionary Airlift Squadron commander. The 745th EAS forward deployed five aircraft and about 50 crewmembers, maintainers and support people to Balad Air Base, Iraq, to support the operation.

From active-duty to Air Force Reserve Command C-130s from four different stateside locations, from intelligence to maintenance and three different airframes providing escort to enroute support, the effort combined to show that truly no one comes close, Colonel Otey said.

“For us, victory was defined as 240 jumpers on time, on target and that is what we did,” he added.

While other Army units have conducted airdrop missions in Iraq during Operation Iraqi Freedom, this was the first time the 82nd had done so, according to Army officials. The 82nd had plans for airdrops during both Operations Desert Storm and Iraqi Freedom. But those plans were scrubbed both times. Having been in Iraq for nearly a year without jumping resulted in a need for troops to participate in one to maintain their currency.

Dyess loses teammate in tragic accident

By Master Sgt. Dan Carpenter
Dyess Public Affairs

Team Dyess joined together in a memorial service Monday to bid final farewell to an airman from the 7th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron.

Senior Airman Benjamin Rockwell, a B-1 pneudraulics systems journeyman, was killed Saturday when he was struck by a car on Interstate 20 near Merkel.

“Rocky, as most of us called him, was always the first to volunteer and he never said no to any challenge, no matter how difficult,” said Master Sgt. Edward Rodriguez, 7th AMXS, in comments during the service. “He was a very caring person who was willing to help those in need without personal gains of his own.”

SrA Benjamin Rockwell

“He was a very caring person who was willing to help those in need without personal gains of his own.”

Master Sgt. Edward Rodriguez
7th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron

Airman Rockwell was born June 21, 1980 in Bing, N.Y. He graduated from Susquehanna Community High School in Pennsylvania in June 1998. He entered the Air Force in August 1999 and, after completing basic military training, attended the B-1 Pneudraulics Systems

Specialist Course at Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas.

His awards and decorations include the Air Force Commendation Medal (posthumously), the Air Force Achievement Medal with one oak leaf cluster, the Air Force Outstanding Unit Award with Valor and the Air Force Good Conduct Medal.

“He was looking forward to the upcoming deployment and the challenges this trip would bring. Rocky truly loved the Air Force and was proud to serve his country,” said Sergeant Rodriguez. “I know he is at peace in God’s arms now because, as we all know, during his brief life on earth, he earned his place in Heaven.”

A member of the three-time Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys will tour the base Thursday to meet the troops.

Chad Hennings, also a retired Air Force Reserve major and 1988 Air Force Academy Graduate, played defensive tackle with the Cowboys from 1992-2000, helping them win championships in 1993, 1994, 1996. Major Hennings will be available at the following locations for a meet and greet:

- 10:10 a.m. at the maintenance hangar
- 10:50 a.m. at the 3-Bay Hangar
- 11:25 a.m. at the 39th/40th Operations building
- 12:10 p.m. at the Longhorn Dining Facility
- 1:40 p.m. at the Dyess Clinic
- 2:25 p.m. at The Hangar Center.
- 3:10 p.m. at the 28th Bomb Squadron Posters of Major Hennings to be autographed are available to be picked up at each location listed above.

Major Hennings played football for the Air Force Academy and was picked by the Cowboys in the 11th round of the National Football League draft in 1988, but decided to fulfill his Air Force commitment.

After graduating from the academy in 1988, Major Hennings went on to become an A-10 pilot and flew missions over northern Iraq and Turkey in 1991 as part of Operation Provide Comfort.

In 1992 he left active-duty after successfully trying out for the Dallas Cowboys.

After playing nine years with the cowboys and earning three championship rings, Major Hennings ended his career after the 2000 season due to bone spurs in his neck. He continued to serve in the Air Force Reserve before retiring in 2003.

The Action Line provides a direct line of communication between Col. Jonathan George, 7th Bomb Wing commander, and the people of Dyess. As a general rule, people should use their chain of command or contact the agency involved first, however, if you are not satisfied, call 696-3355 or e-mail action@dyess.af.mil and leave your message. ## Potential danger

 With the Delaware Gate open to all military personnel, I have noticed that many people are not used to the area and have little regard for the children trying to cross the street. I think we need to make folks aware of this potential danger and we could save a child's life. Perhaps bringing the subject up at a commander's call or sending out an email to all units would help.

To help address customer concerns try calling one of these base agencies for assistance:

- Area Defense Counsel -- 696-4233
- Base exchange -- 692-8996
- Base locator - 696-3098
- Base operator -- 696-3113

- Civil engineering -- 696-2253
- Commissary -- 696-4802
- Detachment 222, AFOSI -- 696-2296

 Thank you for bringing this to our attention. It is of the utmost importance that every person driving on base practice good roadway safety. In the case of the Delaware Gate, I urge every-one to exercise special caution to protect our young ones at this intersection, and we will be using our internal information channels to remind drivers to stay alert and always think safety.

Mentorship -- Do you know who's learning from you?

By Lt. Col. Oran Carroll
7th Mission Support Squadron commander

All of us are a mentor to someone. Do you know who you mentor? Throughout my career, I've been inspired and taught by hundreds of mentors. Yet, despite reading many books and the formal studies from professional military education on mentoring, I've found over the years that the most powerful mentors are folks like you that I work with and around everyday. Are you one of the officers, senior NCOs, NCOs, airmen or civilians I'm talking about? Believe it or not, everyday you afford me the opportunity to both be a mentor and be mentored. It's folks like you who have helped me in my professional competence and knowledge. Whether we realize it or not, we all learn something new everyday. Not only my career, but my life's philosophy has been shaped by watching and learning from those around me. Hopefully I'll help you learn something new as well. Mentoring is everyone's responsibility, not just those in supervisory positions. It's done one-on-one, formally or informally, pre-planned or impromptu. To me, much of what mentors have to offer is not contained in formal education programs or written texts, but rather it's their wisdom based in experience, tempered by maturity and plain old common sense. Every day, members of Team Dyess are afforded many opportunities to teach someone a valuable and perhaps lasting lesson about how to be the best airman, NCO, senior NCO, officer or civilian employee that they can be. Many years ago as a young airman, whether the NCOs or officers realized it, they were my mentors. I knew which ones I wanted to be like, and those that I didn't. By their actions, attitudes and professional appearance, they were mentoring me. They were teaching me everything I needed to know about the Air Force. Many took the time to make a difference. What I learned in those first few years affected everything I've done throughout the rest of my career. The Air Force as a whole is a "learning-rich environment" and Dyess is no exception. All one has to do is look around, watch and learn. Whether you think so or not, all of us are mentors to someone. Intentional or not, we never know who that someone or that time might be. It could be the company grade officers in your squadron or the newest airmen to arrive in your work center. We all learn by observing others around us. I believe that if you're in my Air Force, military or civilian, you're a mentor to someone, regardless of rank or grade, like it or not. Are you taking the time to make a difference? Do you know who's learning from you?

Leadership -- 'Nuggets' offer leaders food for thought

By Lt. Col. Terrie Ford
7th Services Squadron commander

At the August 2003 Air Force Services Worldwide Commanders' and Directors' Workshop, Col. Horace Larry, Air Force Services deputy director, and Col. Joe Mazzola, Air Force Services Agency commander, led a breakout session entitled, "Commander/Director Leadership -- Nuggets, Nuggets, Nuggets." It was the best discussion on leadership I had been a part of in a long while. The "nuggets" of wisdom and advice that were shared transcend our stovepipes and offer leaders in all functional areas and of all grades food for thought on one of the premier and defining characteristics of military service -- leadership. Before collecting nuggets from the attendees, Colonel Mazzola presented 10 leadership principles to get the juices flowing. If you've ever studied leadership, you've no doubt seen similar lists of desirable traits for leaders. Great leaders:

- ◆ Never stop growing. Take the success journey rather than the journey to success.
- ◆ Stand for something. Know and do what's best, no matter who is watching -- have a vision.
- ◆ Have great passion for what you do.
- ◆ Have great energy for how you do it.
- ◆ Make the tough calls. Take the helm when the seas are rough.
- ◆ Have great integrity. We must be people of unquestionable character.
- ◆ Avoid sweetheart deals. Don't accept preferential treatment.
- ◆ Focus on the end state. Drive toward the commander's intent and refuse to quit.
- ◆ Are incredibly loyal both up and down the chain of command.
- ◆ Stay fit and keep their troops fit.

These ideas jump-started a lively exchange of leadership ideas among the attendees. The wisdom that comes with experience was evident in many of these nuggets that could perhaps help others avoid hazards as they navigate through an Air Force career. There were far too many "nuggets" to list them all here; these are the ones that made my top 10 list.

- The bottleneck is always at the top of the bottle. Great leaders keep things moving.
- Don't expect your troops to do things you wouldn't be willing to do yourself -- people perform, not the rank.
- Inspect what you expect -- set expectations, then follow up.
- Develop the ability to "see around corners." Anticipate what's coming next.
- Recognize the difference between time honored traditions and bad habits -- then knock off the bad habits.
- Use more than one form of communication, and use every tool available.
- Control your emotions. Don't give feedback while angry and never, ever, send an angry e-mail.
- Bad news never gets better with age.
- The best job you'll ever have is the one you've got right now. Don't squander the opportunity.
- Step out of your comfort zone -- and push it up.

Hopefully these leadership nuggets will spark your enthusiasm, perhaps make you chuckle and definitely inspire you to be the best leader you can be. To quote Colonel Larry, "Give it your all and have a ball!"

For the airlifters, the opportunity to help with the training was a chance to “showcase our capabilities.”

“Anytime we get to do a ‘real world’ airdrop, it’s exciting,” said Maj. Mike Minihan, 745 EAS operations director and ground mission commander for the exercise. Minihan is deployed from Dyess’ 40th Airlift Squadron.

Traffic Management Office combines service, new web site for smooth move

By Master Sgt. Dan Carpenter
Dyess Public Affairs

While the summer months may be considered the highest season for permanent change of station moves, these transfers go on year round.

Officials at Dyess' traffic management office said no matter when the PCS move occurs, the same key things to remember pertain.

"Preparing for, and executing a PCS move can be some of the most stressful times in a military career," said Master Sgt. William Warren, TMO superintendent. "Planning ahead is absolutely critical to ensure they get the information they need, the pack and move dates they want and the service they deserve."

To ease the strain, Air Force officials recently launched "AF Move," a Web site designed to put as much moving-related information as possible only a mouse-click away.

"This is an absolutely outstanding Web site," said Maj. Gen. Craig Rasmussen, Air Force director of logistics readiness. "It is the gold standard for our Air Force personnel to use before, during and after their personal property move has been completed."

While many units have local sites to help Air Force families in the moving process, this site aims to give people Air Force-level guidance.

"We want this site to become institutional, so that anyone in the Air Force, military or civilian, can go there to search out information," said Randy Teske, Air Force personal property and passenger policy traffic management specialist. "Let's face it, we only move now every three or four years, so we become out of touch because processes and entitlements change."

The site links users to everything from making permanent-change-of-station moving arrangements to tracking a personally owned vehicle shipment.

"You can go into the carrier industry and trace your shipments," said Jim McAllister, personal property and passenger policy division chief. "You can even go in and see local laws on certain items that may be restricted."

With a combination of current services and the new Web site, PCS moves may become a bit less burdensome, but Sergeant Warren stressed the need to keep on top of all arrangements.

"The top three things people forget to do when PCSing," he said, "are being home when the packers arrive, coordinating all changes through the TMO and de-conflicting things like final house cleaning, closings and vacating of apartments with the packer's schedule."

Sergeant Warren said each TMO had input into the new Web site, and while the site is an important tool in the PCS move process, the local office is the best point of contact for immediate, "human" answers.

"We are here to help you with your move, so please don't wait until the last minute... come see us right away upon notification of your assignment," he added. "There is not a question or situation we haven't handled."

The next time PCS orders drive one to pack up personal property and head for a new base, <http://afmove.hq.af.mil> can help keep the headaches and hassles to a minimum. Dyess' TMO professionals can be reached at 696-1020.

Airman Aaron Walker

Jacob Hey (top) tries to score a point on Joe Warren during a wrestling practice session at the Olympic Training Center.

Wrestler's eyes fixed on Athens Olympics

By Airman 1st Class Mike Meares
50th Space Wing Public Affairs

Sitting in a quiet corner of the wrestling room at the Olympic Training Center, Jacob Hey stares into the bright yellow color of the floor mats mentally preparing himself to conquer his next obstacle.

A year after successful reconstructive shoulder surgery, the Greco-Roman wrestler is back to 100 percent and has his eyes fixed on Athens, Greece, and the 2004 Summer Olympics.

Hey, a staff sergeant, is a member of the All-Air Force Wrestling Team through the World Class Athlete Program and is training for his second chance at the Summer Olympics -- this time in the birthplace of Greco-Roman wrestling, his specialty.

“Jacob is the dark horse on the mat this year,” said Rich Estrella, All-Air Force Wrestling Team coach. “He is always a split-second away from a championship and is feared because he can be so dangerously explosive.”

Hey has wrestled for the All-Air Force Wrestling Team for five years and has moved up through the national ranks in the 60-kilogram weight class.

Moving through the ranks has earned him respect from other wrestlers, including former Olympians.

“I have to be solid anytime I wrestle Jacob because he is strong in ways most people are not,” said Jim Gruenwald, 2000 Olympian, currently ranked No.1 nationally.

“I can’t score on him the way I score points on most people. I’m afraid he’ll score on me if I’m not careful.”

Hey works out twice a day trying to take his wrestling to the next level.

“I’m ready to go,” said a confident Hey. “I’m taking each day, each workout and each match as they come. There are no slouches at this level. I try to do as much as I can to get the edge in a match.”

Hey travels all over the world with his team, competing against wrestlers from Russia, Iran, Uzbekistan, Turkey, Mexico, Poland, Sweden and France -- countries with impressive records in wrestling.

Each year, Hey participates in the Armed Forces Championships. He is a former gold and silver medalist at this event.

The next Armed Forces Championship tournament will be held in New Orleans in March. If Hey wins this tournament, he is guaranteed a spot at the Olympic Team Trials.

“Jacob is an emotional, hard-headed wrestler,” Estrella said. “He doesn’t give in or give up. Wrestling is his life.”

Varsity crushes another opponent

Ball handling, solid defense, non-stop offense too much for 7 BW/MSS

By Airman James Kang
Dyess Public Affairs

The Dyess varsity basketball team crushed the 7th Bomb Wing/Mission Support Squadron, 65-37, in an intramural basketball blowout Feb 26.

In the opening moments, varsity seized control of the game when Michael Doss, varsity, picked off a pass and launched the ball down the court to Lacy McNeil for a wide open, two-handed slam.

McNeil continued varsity's 10-0 scoring drive with back to back three pointers and led the team with a whopping 17 points in the first half.

Varsity's solid defense held the 7th BW/MSS to only three baskets and a combined total of eight points, leaving them with a substantial 23-point deficit by the end of the first half.

The combined 7th BW/MSS regrouped themselves during the break at halftime and came out strong and energized -- ready to fight for every possession, trying to close the gap.

Kraig Gilcrease and David Butler led a 9-2 7th BW/MSS scoring drive, draining a couple of mid- to long-range jump shots.

They also scorched the three point line, firing four of six from downtown.

But varsity's offense surged again, shutting down the 7th BW/MSS's drive, led by McNeil's consistent shooting and Hill's scoring in the paint.

Putting the 7th BW/MSS out of contention, Varsity capitalized on its ball handling skills, with multiple circus-style passes.

"We were really pleased with our overall performance in the game and our ball handling in particular," said Rob Morris, varsity.
